You haven’t been feeling well for a few days, and you think it’s probably time to get checked out by your doctor.

Now What?

You get a paper cut while putting a worksheet in a folder.

Now What?

You accidentally touch a candle flame and get a small burn.

Now What?

You fall down the stairs and can’t move your legs.

Now What?

You sprain your ankle in gym and it hurts, but you can walk.

Now What?

You burn your finger on the stove and have a small blister.

Now What?

You see someone with his hands around his throat, not breathing.

Now What?

You jam your finger while playing basketball.

Now What?

You see someone get hit by a car while crossing the street.

Now What?

You bank your knee walking through a crowded doorway.

Now What?
